

Maddie Troesh

Maddie Troesh's work seeks to capture the beauty and intricate detail found in nature to discuss the matter of deforestation and climate change through many mixed media including painting, drawing, sculpture, and digital art. Maddie has found that nature is her muse, and she has a deep connection that she wishes to convey to viewers through her art. Throughout her work, she aims to inspire awareness of the profound impact that human actions have on nature so they can have a renewed respect for the environment and world they live in.

Maddie Troesh was born in 2000 in Houston, Texas but moved to Colorado Springs at an early age. She currently studies at the University of Colorado at Colorado Springs and will graduate with her BA in Visual Arts in the summer of 2024. From drawing, to sculpture, to digital art, Maddie has found a particular love for painting in pointillism and is currently exploring the ideas of nature, deforestation, and climate change. She is currently a full-time college student and plans to expand her knowledge of digital art and work in graphic design after graduating.
